New photos released in Times Square bombing

Renewed effort. The FBI and NYPD are seeking new leads in the case.

The FBI and the NYPD yesterday announced a reward of up to $65,000 for information leading to the identification, arrest and conviction of a suspect or suspects involved in the unsolved 2008 bombing of an Army recruiting station in Times Square.

New video surveillance footage of the suspect or suspects and new photos were also released by the FBI.

"Someone, somewhere, knows something about a bomber who's still on the run," FBI Assistant Director-in-Charge George Venizelos said.

The FBI believes the person or people responsible for this bombing may also have been behind two other bombings in New York City: one in 2005 at the British consulate and another in 2007 at the Mexican consulate.

The FBI and the NYPD will be using the hashtag #BikeBomber to release information about the attacks and solicit information via Twitter.

The surveillance video and photos are being displayed on digital billboards throughout the northeast, including in Times Square.

The bombing occurred in the early morning hours of March 6, 2008. The consulate bombings that the FBI suspects could be related also occurred in the early morning hours, between 3 a.m. and 4 a.m.; those bombs were also set by a person on a bicycle.

According to the FBI, the suspect rode a blue Ross bicycle and got off his bike at West 43rd Street and Seventh Avenue.

The suspect then apparently placed a bomb at the Army recruiting station, lit a fuse, and fled on the bicycle south on Broadway. The bike was reportedly found in a dumpster near Madison Avenue and 38th Street.

The suspect was last seen wearing a gray sweatshirt and pants of an unknown color, the FBI said. The height, weight, age, sex and race of the suspect are still unknown.

While the suspect appears to have been working alone, the FBI said that it's possible there were as many as five other people working as lookouts or as a surveillance team in Times Square at the time that the bombing occurred.

Authorities are urging anyone with information to call the FBI at 212-384-1000. Callers can remain anonymous.

New information

The FBI believes that the person responsible for the bombing might have worked with others.

- The bombing occurred in the early morning hours of March 6, 2008.
- One of the photos shows part of the explosive device used in the attack.
- The ammunition used in the device was typical of that used in warfare in Iraq and Afghanistan.
- The suspect's bike was reportedly found in a dumpster near Madison Avenue and 38th Street.
- The FBI and the NYPD will be using the hashtag #BikeBomber to solicit information about the incident.

Public's assistance

"Today we're asking for the public's assistance in finding those responsible and encouraging the public to look closely at these photos and video."

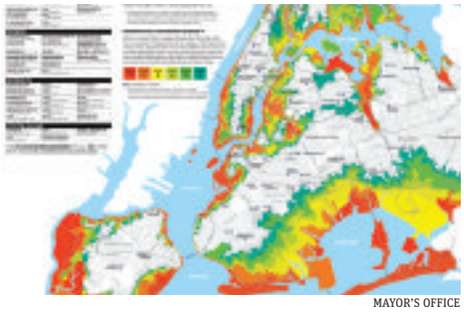
City releases hurricane evac maps



MAYOR'S OFFICE

Final updates to New York City's hurricane evacuation zones were announced by the city yesterday. The new maps now include 600,000 residents who weren't covered under the old zoning system.

The updated zone system now places a full 37 percent of New Yorkers in an emergency evacuation zone. It also swaps out the old alphabetical zoning system in favored of a numbered system.

"The new zones incorporate the best-available data and will help the City to more effectively communicate to those most at risk, depending on the characteristics of a particular storm," said Deputy Mayor Cas Holloway.

To support the recent zoning updates, the city has also upgraded its Hurricane Evacuation Zone Finder to support mobile phones, which will help residents find their evacuation zone using GPS technology.

Updates to the evacuation plan could prevent future damage from storms like superstorm Sandy, which left 42 New Yorkers dead and millions of dollars in damage, the city said.

Groups to sue over Muslim surveillance

Spying. The groups say that the NYPD Muslim surveillance program is illegal.

The American Civil Liberties Union, the New York Civil Liberties Union and other legal organizations filed a lawsuit against the city on Tuesday on behalf of New Yorkers who say they were targeted by the NYPD's Muslim surveillance program.

Attorneys bringing the lawsuit say the program is unconstitutional. They are moving for the records of the plaintiffs to be wiped clean.

One of the plaintiffs is a 20-year-old college sophomore, Asad Dandia, who co-founded a student group called Muslims Giving Back.

The group was infiltrated by an FBI informant, according to the NYCLU.

Another plaintiff is the spiritual leader at a Brooklyn mosque, Masjid Al-Ansar, which has reportedly been under surveillance by the NYPD since 2008.

Imam Hamid Hassan Raza said he has been visited on several occasions without reason.

City attorney Celeste Koeleveld defended the Muslim surveillance program, citing the Boston Marathon bombing as evidence of "the critical importance of 'on-the-ground' research."

New study

Brooklyn has most traffic deaths in city

Brooklyn has the highest rate of traffic deaths in the city, and an alarming number of motorists drive faster than the speed limit in the borough, a study shows.

According to the new report by the advocacy group Transportation Alternatives, a total of 79 Brooklyn residents were killed in traffic crashes in 2011, and 23,000 others were injured.

Queens followed with 67 fatalities in 2011, the Bronx had 65, Manhattan had 45 and Staten Island only had 12 fatalities.

The group tracked the speed of drivers in Bay Ridge, Canarsie, Greenpoint and Midwood, and found that a full 88 percent of surveyed motorists drove at unlawful speeds.

According to the group, speeding is the leading cause of fatal crashes and kills more New Yorkers than drunk drivers and drivers on cell phones combined.

Solar chargers for cell phones debut in NYC

After Sandy. The outlets will give the public a place to charge their dying phones.

The solar phone chargers are a result of superstorm Sandy. / HAND OUT

New York City unveiled the first of 25 free solar charging stations for mobile phones yesterday, installed in response to superstorm Sandy, which wiped out power and forced residents to walk miles to charge their phones.

The Street Charge stations are Mayor Michael Bloomberg's latest answer to flaws in infrastructure exposed by the storm that ripped into the East Coast in October 2012 and left about 900,000 New York City residents without power.

Located throughout the city's five boroughs, the charging stations are part of a public-private partnership with AT&T. Powered by solar panels, they will work day or night.

Six ports in each station will allow the public to charge phones, tablets and other devices even if the city's power is out.

In the first days after the storm, some of the city's residents walked miles to charge their electronic devices.

Street Charge units were put to work this week in Union Square in Manhattan, Fort Greene Park in Brooklyn and on Governors Island, with more opening by the end of the summer, the city said.

AT&T is paying for the 25 stations, with the city bearing no cost, Marissa Shorenstein, president of AT&T's New York office said.

Sandy brought a record 14-foot storm surge to lower Manhattan and inflicted an estimated $19 billion in damages on the city.

The storm, which claimed more than 130 lives in the United States and Canada, left more than 8 million homes and businesses along the East Coast in the dark. REUTERS

Animal cruelty. Man indicted for allegedly training dogs to fight

Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes announced the indictment of a man accused of training pit bulls to fight.

Leslie Alexander, 39, of Brooklyn, faces more than two dozen charges in connection with dogfighting.

Hynes slammed animal fighting as "a barbaric and inhumane practice."

He noted that breeding and training animals for fighting is a felony under New York state law and can bring a sentence of up to four years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

NYPD officers were granted a warrant to search Alexander's home for guns and drugs, but when they executed the search on May 24, they reportedly found seven pit bulls and equipment used to train dogs for dogfighting, including 25 dog kennels, devices to strengthen the dogs' jaws, syringes, two dog treadmills and a "breaking stick" to be used to break a dog's grip on an animal or other object.

Additionally, Alexander's garage had allegedly been converted to a dogfighting arena.

Hynes said a handgun and ammunition were also found at the house.

The dogs appeared malnourished and had scars and signs of trauma, animal care officers said.

- Alexander is being charged with 22 counts of animal fighting.
- If convicted, he could face up to seven years in prison.

LIRR train derailment causes delays

An eastbound Long Island Rail Road train carrying nearly 1,000 passengers derailed in the East River Tunnel on Monday, delaying trains during the Monday evening and Tuesday morning rush hours.

A total of 35 out of 144 morning trains were canceled or diverted Tuesday, according to the MTA.

Two cars of a 10-car Hempstead-bound train derailed shortly after 6 p.m. on Monday as it left Penn Station and entered the tunnel. No one was injured, and most passengers were led onto a rescue train.

The derailed train was removed early Tuesday morning.

The cause of the derailment is under investigation.

Indictment in Village hate crime killing

Anti-gay shooting. Elliot Morales was charged with murder as a hate crime for killing Mark Carson.

The Manhattan District Attorney's office announced yesterday an indictment in the fatal shooting of 32-year-old Mark Carson in Greenwich Village last month.

Police reported that Carson was shot by a suspect who made anti-gay comments to him. The fatal shooting was the most violent of several alleged hate crimes last month.

"This young man's tragic death serves as a reminder of the discrimination that many of our family members, coworkers and friends still face," said Manhattan District Attorney Cy Vance.

The alleged shooter, Elliot Morales, is charged with one count of murder in the second degree as a hate crime, five counts of criminal possession of a weapon and two counts of menacing, including one count of menacing a police officer.

According to Vance, statements made on the record in court describing the May 17 incident indicate that after being chastised by a restaurant worker for urinating outside the restaurant, Morales confronted employees, barking anti-gay comments, displaying a gun and threatening to shoot patrons.

Morales allegedly left the establishment and ran into Carson walking with another male, and made further anti-gay comments.

He eventually shot Carson point-blank in the head, according to police.

Vance said an NYPD officer tracked Morales down. When confronted, Morales pointed his gun at the officer. When Morales fumbled, the officer wrested the gun away.

Morales faces a possible sentence of 25 years to life in prison for the most severe of the charges against him.

Former New York City Mayor Ed Koch died earlier this year. / GETTY IMAGES

Koch's grave has the wrong date of birth

Cemetery. The former mayor's tombstone lists him as being born in 1942.

Final resting place

Mayor Ed Koch's tombstone has him listed as born almost 20 years after his real birthdate.

- The former mayor was born in 1924, but the gravestone says 1942.
- Koch is buried in Trinity Church Cemetery in Washington Heights.
- The company that made the tombstone said that it will correct the mistake.

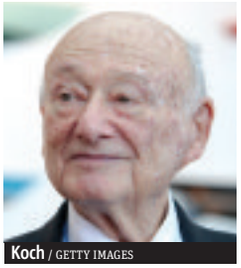
The tombstone of former New York City Mayor Ed Koch, who died earlier this year, is engraved with the wrong birth year.

Koch was born on Dec. 12, 1924, but the birthdate on his tombstone reads "December 12, 1942."

The mistake is ironic since Koch was known for having planned the details of his burial years before his death, including what would be written on his tombstone.

The former mayor, who is buried in Trinity Church Cemetery in Washington Heights, bought the plot because he said that he wanted to stay in Manhattan forever.

He also chose to have inscribed a quote by journalist Daniel Pearl, who was killed by al-Qaeda terrorists in 2002: "My father is Jewish; my mother is Jewish; I am Jewish."



Koch / GETTY IMAGES

The date was not engraved when Koch was buried, NBC News reports. It was engraved earlier this month, and the mistake was due to an "inadvertent error," Tommy Flynn of Flynn Funeral and Cremation Memorial Services told NBC.

"I have to make it right. I will correct it," he said.

"As Ed Koch used to say, 'It's always important to correct the record,'" said Koch's former chief of staff Diane Coffey about the error.

Koch died of congestive heart failure on Feb. 1.

He was mayor from 1978 to 1989, through a difficult time in the city's history. Koch was known for his trademark phrase, "How'm I Doing?"

US poll. Airlines improve performance but still get low marks

Consumers are more satisfied with airlines in recent years, but the industry still gets relatively low marks — mainly due to the onboard experience, according to a new customer poll.

The American Consumer Satisfaction Index — which surveys some 70,000 U.S. customers annually on more than 40 industries, ranging from apparel and hospitals to banks and insurance — found only television and Internet service providers ranked lower. It found that full-service and fast-food restaurants, hotels and shipping companies provided consumers with a better experience.

But ACSI said airlines were making progress, with a ranking of 69 on a 100-point scale — up two points from 67 last year — for their best mark in nearly two decades.

NSA: Programs have halted more than 50 acts of terrorism

Classified. The NSA is protecting residents from terrorist attacks on American soil.

General Keith Alexander, the director of the U.S. National Security Agency, said yesterday the NSA's data-gathering programs had prevented potential terrorist attacks more than 50 times since Sept. 11, 2001.

"In recent years these programs, together with other intelligence, have protected the U.S. and our allies from terrorist threats across the globe to include helping prevent ... potential terrorist events over 50 times since 9/11," he said in testimony to the U.S. House of Representatives intelligence committee.

Alexander said the intelligence agencies would give documents about those cases to the committee for its review in a classified setting today, and that he would discuss two thwarted plots during his testimony yesterday.

Snowden to Iceland?

Leaker makes an informal approach seeking asylum

Iceland has received an informal approach from an intermediary who says Edward Snowden wants to seek asylum there.

Snowden made headlines after leaking details of a government surveillance program to two newspapers.

In a column in Icelandic daily Fretttabladid, WikiLeaks spokesman Kristinn Hrafnsson wrote that a middleman had approached him on behalf of Snowden.

"On June 12, I received a message from Edward Snowden where he asked me to notify the Icelandic government that he wanted to seek asylum in Iceland," Hrafnsson, who is also an investigative journalist in Iceland, told Reuters.

Rookie teachers woefully unprepared, report says

Classroom. But the study did not typically evaluate the quality of teaching within the training program.

The U.S. teacher training system is badly broken, turning out rookie educators who have little hands-on experience running classrooms and are quickly overwhelmed by the job, according to a report released yesterday by the National Council on Teacher Quality.

The review found "an industry of mediocrity," with the vast majority of programs earning fewer than three stars on a four-star rating scale — and many earning no stars at all.

The council, a bipartisan research and advocacy group, spent eight years developing the methodology, fighting in court to gain access to data and analyzing the information before issuing the report. It contains detailed analysis of 608 colleges and universities with teacher training programs and partial data on 522 others.

Those 1,130 institutions collectively turn out more than 170,000 novice teachers annually, about 80 percent of the new teachers entering classrooms each year. Most of the rest come from nontraditional training programs that are not necessarily affiliated with colleges, such as Teach for America.

Freshly minted teachers "don't know how to teach reading, don't know how to master a classroom, don't know how to use data," said Kate Walsh, the council's president. "The results were dismal." REUTERS

Nutrition. Starbucks to post calorie labels in stores nationwide

Starbucks will display calorie counts for coffees and snacks at all its U.S. locations starting Tuesday, ahead of a federal requirement that large food chains disclose nutrition information.

The company said yesterday that the labels were meant to encourage health-conscious consumers to further customize orders by opting for sugar-free syrups or nonfat milk over more calorie-heavy alternatives.

"People are already customizing their drinks," said Lisa Passe, a Starbucks spokeswoman.

She added that the coffee company's pastries will also come with a calorie count. REUTERS

One sexy patent case

US patent case climaxes with win for vibrator maker

Couples in the United States looking to spice up their sex lives will have to do without certain adult toys after a U.S. trade panel ruled on Monday that some companies are violating a patent held by a Canadian company for a two-armed vibrator.

The U.S. International Trade Commission found that vibrator maker Lelo Inc. as well as distributors and a retailer infringe on Standard Innovation Corp.'s patent for a two-armed vibrator that couples can use during intercourse.

Standard Innovation, which is based in Ottawa, Ontario, and is privately held, filed an infringement complaint against Lelo and a long list of other companies in early 2012, accusing them of infringing on Standard's patent for the adult toys, designed to be worn while a couple has sex.

On its website Standard Innovation describes the We-Vibe family of vibrators as "a global sensation."

The commission's ruling overturns a preliminary ruling by an ITC judge, who found in January that the patent holder did not have enough commercial activity in the United States to have standing to prevail at the ITC.

The full commission disagreed.

It banned the sale of vibrators made by Lelo Inc. and distributed or sold by Nalpac Enterprises Ltd., Williams Trading Co., Honey's Place Inc. and Lover's Lane & Co. REUTERS

Jolie stunt double sues News Corp over hacking

Jolie uses stunt doubles during tricky scenes. / GETTY IMAGES

Phone hacks. She claims the interference from the tabloids caused her to lose voice messages.

A stunt double for Oscar-winning actress Angelina Jolie has sued News Corp. over allegations its British newspapers hacked her phone, the first lawsuit in the United States against the company since a hacking scandal broke out two years ago.

The lawsuit filed on June 13 by professional stunt double, Eunice Huthart, said reporters from News Corp.'s tabloids The Sun and the defunct News of the World hacked her mobile phone while she was working for Jolie on location in Los Angeles.

A spokesman for News Corp. declined to comment on the lawsuit.

Huthart's lawsuit said the hacking occurred in 2004 and 2005 while she was in the United States and Britain and resulted in lost voice messages that she never received.

The missing voicemails provided information later used in news reports, according to the court document in U.S. District Court in California. Huthart is seeking unspecified damages.

The allegations include stories that ran in the tabloids about Jolie's budding relationship with actor Brad Pitt — when only a tight circle of people had knowledge of it — while they were filming "Mr. & Mrs. Smith." REUTERS

This is how rumors get started

The lawsuit said that the tabloids intercepted messages left by Jolie regarding her movie career. It cited a News of the World article with the headline "Pitt Stop for Jolie" that began "Hollywood babe Angelina Jolie has threatened to quit the movies for good."

Scandal

- The phone hacking scandal sent shockwaves through the British establishment, forced the closure of the Sunday tabloid News of the World, prompted a huge police inquiry and led to the arrest of more than 60 people.
- But until the Huthart lawsuit, the scandal has been contained in Britain.
- News Corp. is preparing to split its publishing assets, which includes its British newspapers, the Wall Street Journal and book publisher HarperCollins, from its cable networks and movie studio on June 28.

US to hold peace talks with Afghan Taliban in Doha

Time. News of talks comes as the U.S. and its allies try to meet a 2014 deadline for an end to combat in Afghanistan.

The United States will meet the Taliban this week for talks aimed at achieving peace in Afghanistan, where U.S.-led forces and insurgents have fought a bloody and costly war for the past 12 years, U.S. officials said yesterday.

The Taliban opened an office in Doha, the Qatari capital, yesterday to help restart talks. It said it wanted a political solution that would bring about a just government and end foreign occupation of Afghanistan.

A senior U.S. official said the talks would start in Doha tomorrow, but President Barack Obama cautioned against expectations of quick progress, saying the peace process would not be easy or quick.

U.S. officials said the process could take many years and be subject to reversals.

"This is an important first step toward reconciliation, although it's a very early step," Obama said after a G8 meeting in Enniskillen, Northern Ireland.

"We anticipate there will be a lot of bumps in the road."

U.S. officials say they hope the meeting will open the way for the first-ever official peace talks between the government of Afghan President Hamid Karzai and the Taliban, which has waged a 12-year campaign to oust him and foreign troops.

The Taliban have until now said they would not countenance talks with the government, which they consider a stooge of the United States and other Western states in the NATO coalition fighting in Afghanistan. REUTERS

Legislation

House won't consider immigration bill unless GOP backs it

The House of Representatives will not consider immigration legislation that does not have the support of most Republicans, Speaker John Boehner said yesterday, casting doubt on prospects for reform as the Senate prepares to vote on a bill giving millions of illegal immigrants a chance to become citizens.

"I don't see any way of bringing an immigration bill to the floor that doesn't have a majority support of Republicans," Boehner told reporters.

The House is controlled by Republicans, and Boehner determines what legislation gets voted on. The Senate is controlled by Democrats. REUTERS

Pork-infused ammo

Magic bullet against terror?

Security services can now stop listening to our calls, as a simple solution to Islamist terror has been discovered in the form of pork bullets. Idaho-based company Jihawg Ammo is producing ammunition coated with pig-infused paint, believing that fear of contact with the "unclean" animal will discourage terrorists. Keith, a spokesman at Jihawg, told us more.

How did you come up with this?
The idea started after hearing about plans for a mosque at Ground Zero, which we thought were inappropriate. We kept coming back to it over time and talking to people in the military, who said that on days when there were swine in the area, there were no attacks by terrorists. We put two and two together and realized it's a natural deterrent, a peaceful answer that saves the jihadists and the victims.

What's the recipe?
It's traditional ballistic paint, but it took a year to figure out how to infuse it with pork. I can't share exactly how we do it — trade secret — but it's a compound of bone, meal and flesh.

What reactions have you been getting?
Web traffic has gone crazy, and we're selling 15,000 units a day. Wal-Mart thought they were cute, but we're mainly selling to locals — they like that it goes against political correctness.

Are you worried about causing race hate?
We can talk about radical Islam without being negative about Islam itself. Two of our group dropped out because they were worried, but if we're attacked, that proves our point. MWN

Assange anniversary: one year in the embassy

"The time he saves not traveling is devoted to work, and he gets a lot done."
Kristinn Hrafnsson, Acting WikiLeaks chief

Time saved. Confinement has been put to good use, said acting WikiLeaks chief Kristinn Hrafnsson.

Inside the gold-framed double doors, the Ecuadorian Embassy of London is a modest apartment with white-painted walls and simple furniture. Not the most fitting residence for a world-famous hero, or villain.

But since June 19, 2012, WikiLeaks boss Julian Assange has gone from pioneer to captive, forced into hiding to avoid extradition to Sweden, where charges on sexual assault await him. The Australian will be arrested if he steps outside the building, so the jet-set lifestyle has been replaced by a single room and his laptop.

DVD box sets of "The Twilight Zone" and "The West Wing" keep him company, and an ultraviolet lamp replaces daylight. Assange lives nocturnally, according to reports, working until dawn supported by heavy doses of caffeine.

The 41-year-old has not been forgotten, from the crowds outside his window shouting "freedom fighter" to his generous hosts, who have granted him asylum and allowed him to cramp their workplace. Further, celebrity guests from Lady Gaga to Oliver Stone have visited, with British filmmaker Ken Loach donating a treadmill on which the captive runs miles each day.

Protesters fill the streets in Brazil

Dissent. It is the latest in a wave of demonstrations the country has seen in two decades.

Thousands demonstrate in the streets of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, on Monday against the increase in the public transportation fare and the cost of staging international soccer tournaments. / GETTY IMAGES

As many as 200,000 demonstrators marched through the streets of Brazil's biggest cities on Monday in a swelling wave of protest tapping into widespread anger at poor public services, police violence and government corruption.

The marches, organized mostly through snowballing social media campaigns, blocked streets and halted traffic in more than a half-dozen cities, including Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Belo Horizonte and Brasilia, where demonstrators climbed onto the roof of Brazil's Congress building and then stormed it.

Monday's demonstrations were the latest in a flurry of protests in the past two weeks that have added to growing unease over Brazil's sluggish economy, high inflation and a spurt in violent crime.

While most of the protests unfolded as a festive display of dissent, some demonstrators in Rio threw rocks at police, set fire to a parked car and vandalized the state assembly building. Vandals also destroyed property in Porto Alegre.

The epicenter of Monday's march shifted from Sao Paulo, where some 65,000 people took to the streets late in the afternoon, to Rio. There, as protesters gathered throughout the evening, crowds ballooned to 100,000 people, local police said. At least 20,000 more gathered in Belo Horizonte.

The protests have gathered pace as Brazil is hosting the Confederation's Cup, a dry run for next year's World Cup soccer championship. The government hopes these events, along with the 2016 Summer Olympics, will showcase Brazil as an emerging power on the global stage.

Contrasting the billions in taxpayer money spent on new stadiums with the shoddy state of Brazil's public services, protesters are using the Confederation's Cup as a counterpoint to amplify their concerns. The tournament got off to shaky start when police clashed with demonstrators outside stadiums at the opening matches in Brasilia and Rio.

"For many years the government has been feeding corruption. People are demonstrating against the system," said Graciela Caçador, a 28-year-old saleswoman protesting in Sao Paulo. "They spent billions of dollars building stadiums and nothing on education and health."

More protests are being organized for the coming days. It is unclear what specific response from authorities would lead the loose collection of organizers across Brazil to consider stopping them. REUTERS

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Elizabeth Banks isn't thrilled about summer, Amanda Bynes is having some work done, Samantha Ronson is frustrated with her social network and Anna Kendrick is already thinking about Halloween.

@ElizabethBanks: We all hate swimsuit shopping, right?

@AmandaBynes: I'm in between nose surgeries! My eyes are black and blue because my nose is broken! I can't wait for my nose to be done! I'll share pics!

Dear Brad: Please cut your hair. Love, Women everywhere

Brad Pitt (or is that a member of The Allman Brothers?) attended the New York premiere of his new movie "World War Z" on Monday night in New York City. I think I speak for women (and mothers) everywhere when I plead: Brad, please do something with that hair of yours. You have such a pretty face!

1

Scott Disick is Patrick Bateman

With his product-coated hair, steely gaze, love of high fashion and dead soul, Scott Disick has channeled a distinct Patrick Bateman vibe for years.

Now, fellow Kardashian baby daddy Kanye West is capitalizing on this eerie resemblance in a new promo for "Yeezus." Disick portrays the Bret Easton Ellis character in the famous "American Psycho" scene where Bateman listens to Huey Lewis with a friend — with bloody consequences.

The West promo is not a great homage. Check it out for yourself on www.metro.us. I think you'll agree that if we knew exactly what Disick's day job was, we would tell him not to quit it.

Brand divorced via text

Pretty sure this is a marriage don't: Russell Brand apparently divorced wife Katy Perry via text message.

"He's a very smart man, a magical man, and I was in love with him when I married him. Let's just say I haven't heard from him since he texted me saying he was divorcing me Dec. 31, 2011," the singer revealed in a new interview with Vogue.

And as for her rebound with John Mayer? "It's over, I was madly in love with him. I still am madly in love with him," she told the mag. "Beautiful mind, tortured soul. I do have to figure out why I am attracted to these broken birds."

Maybe it's because they are hot and famous? Just a guess.

Munn's eyelash problem

In 2012, Olivia Munn announced about suffering from trichotillomania, an anxiety disorder in which the sufferer pulls out his or her own hair. And according to a new interview with Marie Claire, she is still trying to overcome it.

When asked what she's working on, she replied, "Trying to overcome my social anxiety. ... It's manifested in trichotillomania, a disorder that gives me the urge to pull out my eyelashes."

The actress is also working on another disorder, which is probably more familiar to most of us.

"I struggle with wanting to work out," she says. "I hike, surf and dance, but I think I'm going to start doing Pilates — though I'm not happy about it."

Chastain doesn't need arm candy

When it comes to her personal life, Jessica Chastain is looking to keep things under wraps — for now, at least. "Sometimes when someone [in the press] asks me about my dating status, I get really quiet about that because I want to protect it," the "Zero Dark Thirty" star tells E! News.

"Seeing all these interviews with actors talking about loves of their lives and then they break up in a year and you're thinking, 'What if something happens and they end up being a total jerk?' Then you forever have these pictures of you standing on the red carpets together."

Right! But that helps when I write about their divorce (see the Brand and Perry item, left).

Ice Cube: Still as cool as ever

Hip-hop legends. Ice Cube tells us about his career and keeping it real.

Ice Cube chills in the spotlight. / CHRIS MCKAY, WIREIMAGE

Ice Cube has parlayed a hardcore rap career into an entertainment empire that spans movies, television and product endorsements. But the former N.W.A. member and solo artist known for groundbreaking albums such as "AmeriKKKa's Most Wanted" and "Death Certificate" has no plans to switch up his politically charged style. While mainstream rap drowns in escapist tales of cars, clubs and fancy cribs, he says fans can expect "vintage Ice Cube" on his forthcoming album, "Everythang's Corrupt."

"Everything that you've ever gotten from me, I deliver on this record," he says. "My style is straight street knowledge. I don't really cater to what's going on in hip-hop or what's going on in the industry, so to speak. I just dial in on Ice Cube fans and try to keep them satisfied, and everybody else gotta get in where they fit in. I don't want to have to worry about no program director here or no A&R there. That makes it a drag. And being independent, I can just go in the studio and do what I feel."

While he wraps up his 10th album, the actor, writer, producer and director is in talks with distributor New Line Cinema to close out the "Friday" franchise with final installment "Last Friday."

"We're trying to get it done," he says. "New Line has really been neutered by Time Warner, so they can't do as many movies as they usually do per year. So it's just a fight to get 'Last Friday' on their schedule. They only got three or four movies to do a year, and urban comedy is probably low on the totem pole."

Cube — born O'Shea Jackson — is also working on a feature film about Compton collective N.W.A. that will reunite him with "Friday" director F. Gary Gray. He says the movie could hit theaters by mid-2014, and the cast may include his son O'Shea Jr., a budding rapper who goes by the moniker OMG (Oh My Goodness).

"I want my son OMG to play me. He looks like me and he can act, so he can do it," Cube says. "I just had to meet with [Gray] and Dr. Dre to work on the script and keep getting it tighter and tighter, so we're in the process of casting the movie now, so it's full steam ahead. This N.W.A. movie, it's still my dream. That's what I've been dying to make."

Ice Cube says Chuck D is like a brother to him. GETTY IMAGES

Chuck D still on point, Ice Cube says

Ice Cube isn't shy about revealing that his favorite rapper is a tourmate, Public Enemy's Chuck D.

"It's like being on tour with your big brother," Cube says. "He's just one of those dudes who — pound for pound, lyric for lyric — has done the most out of any emcee, because he ain't just rapping no bulls—. ... It's something real. And even when rapping about bulls— is popular, I mean, he still stick to what he do. That's great. For artists like myself, and him being one of my peers and me really looking up to Chuck, it's good that he sticks to the script."

Transplants transforming

Interview.
Transplants singer Rob Aston on the glue that binds this all-star power trio.

You recognize Armstrong from Rancid and Barker from Blink-182.

With the members constantly working on a multitude of projects, it's no wonder that it took so long for Transplants to release new material. To say that drummer Travis Barker, guitarist Tim Armstrong and singer Rob Aston have kept themselves busy since disbanding in 2006 is an understatement. After eight years, the trio is back with a new album, "In a Warzone," which still blends punk rock with hip-hop, like on previous releases, but this time the focus is more on punk, says Aston. "We've all grown up listening to different types of music, but punk rock has always been the backbone for all of us," he says. "I personally think that's the best type of music we make together."

To someone who has never listened to you before, how would you describe Transplants?
If you listen to either our first or second album, it's a little harder to describe because there's so much going on. There are punk rock elements, hip-hop elements, dub elements … all kinds of stuff going on. But I always tell people that we're a punk rock band. We do what we want, and that's punk rock.

Were scheduling conflicts between the three of you the main reason why it took so long to make this album?
We took a break after Warped Tour in 2005, but I guess we worked on the new album for about three years before we turned it in. Obviously it wasn't three years straight, because everyone's busy with other projects. So we recorded when we could, and we didn't want to rush this album or turn in something half-a—ed. When you're gone for a long time, you can't come back with just anything. We had to give it our best, and that's what we did. I think it's our best work by far.

Are there any guest vocalists on the new album worth mentioning?
This time around we only put a few guests on the album. We have Paul Wall on one song, and Bun B and Equipto on another. But that's it, just three rappers. It's kind of funny that this is a punk rock album, but the guests we have are rappers. But that's true to Transplants form. We've always put people on our albums that you normally wouldn't think would be on an album like ours.

"Northern Light" is a visually stunning documentary about low-income families in Michigan. / BAMCINEMAFEST, TETHERBALL

Of an independent mind

Series. The BAMcinemafest turns 5, offering gems from the American indie scene and elsewhere.

Now in its fifth year, the BAMcinemafest focuses on American independents — both upcoming heavies with big names and obscurities that languish without distributors. A few outside voices still get in, from the likes of Uganda and Pakistan, and that's a good thing.

'Ain't Them Bodies Saints'
A lot of pomp for precious little, David Lowery's Sundance fave lathers up a Terrence Malick-y storm for a tale that always feels too slender. Casey Affleck is an outlaw who busts from jail to reunite with his beloved wife (Rooney Mara) and their child. The film has been compared to a folk song, but even three-minute ditties have more meat on 'em.

'Drinking Buddies'
Joe Swanberg sells out, sort of; the filmmaker prone to deliberately sloppy camera work gets an actual cinematographer, as well as a name cast. Olivia Wilde plays a brewery worker in love with her engaged bestie (Jake Johnson). Swanberg has done illicit love before, but the film retains his better qualities.

'I Used to Be Darker'
Matthew Porterfield follows his stunner "Putty Hill" with another survey of people struggling to ignore personal tragedy (here, it's divorce). Less experimental than "Putty," it goes deeper into the void of lives violently uprooted, both in youth and, even scarier, middle age.

'It Felt Like Love'
Straight out of deep south Brooklyn, Eliza Hittman's debut concerns the teenage anxieties of a young loner who spends the summer trying to fit in with neighborhood hooligans. Sexual inexperience leads to near-tragedy, but what's affecting is how she, and the film, are always in an uneasy middle ground — on the precipice of disaster, but never falling over.

'Northern Light'
Though concerned with rural life in wintry economic times, Nick Bentgen's documentary captures all of life, not just the bad stuff. It's one beautiful image after another, showing its Michigan subjects trying to win at various competitions. Ups and downs are captured, but the impression that comes off is people just keepin' on keepin' on.

'Computer Chess'

A decade ago, Andrew Bujalski's micro-budgeted "Funny Ha Ha" helped create the so-called "mumblecore" movement. His fourth is a new kind of film, too, and if others copycat it, cinema will be weirder for it. Genuinely, thrillingly rich and strange, it's a bizarre study of disconnection at a titular competition in the '70s or '80s (like much in the film, it's never clear which), shot with video cameras created in 1969. That's only the tip of the weirdness iceberg. Expect roaming cats, jarring editing and much, much more.

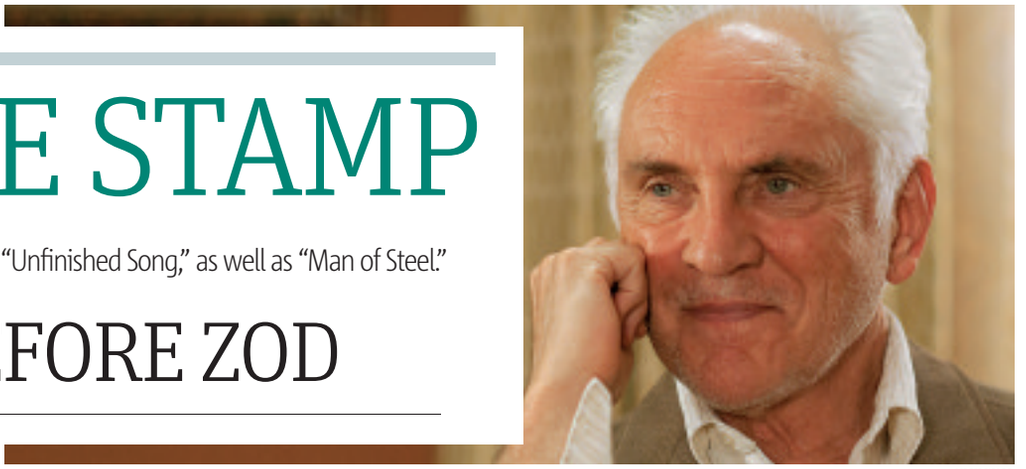
TERENCE STAMP

The acting legend talks about his new film, "Unfinished Song," as well as "Man of Steel."

KNEEL BEFORE ZOD



NICK WALL

British actor Terence Stamp has just about perfected cranky, from playing General Zod in "Superman 2" to his roles in "The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert" or "The Limey." In his latest, "Unfinished Song," he puts all that practice to good use playing the misanthropic but devoted husband of the sunny and cheerful terminally ill Marion (Vanessa Redgrave).

How easy does it make your job when Vanessa Redgrave is playing your wife?

It's not easy, it's just a great blessing, really. A lot of people have remarked that the fact that we're this couple who've been together for 30 years is just kind of a given. It's not spoken about, you know?

Also, having you and Christopher Eccleston play father and son is inspired casting.

When he was cast, my question to the director was, "How's his voice?" — meaning, "What's his dialect?" Because in England your dialect is a kind of class system. It's really how you speak. Apparently what he did was he downloaded both of my "Desert Island Discs" episodes and he listened to my voice — which is so astute. Because it's not me performing, it's me being myself talking about the music that I like. So when he rucked up on the set, he had my voice down pat.

Quoted

"I'm kind of sad. But to be honest with you, I think Dick Donner's Superman movies were the benchmark, really."

Stamp, on his thoughts about the new "Man of Steel"

In an interview last year, director Terence Davies complained about how young English actors are all trying to sound like they're from South London nowadays.

That's funny because that was what I had to lose. I thought, "I'm never going to be able to play Hamlet, I'm never going to be able to play Macbeth talking like that." I'm always amazed by the workings of the universe. It's like a wheel, isn't it? Everything turns round.

What do you think of "Man of Steel," wherein Michael Shannon takes over for your villainous character, General Zod?

I'm kind of sad. But to be honest with you, I think Dick Donner's Superman movies were the benchmark, really. I mean, every kind of comic-book movie of that genre took from those first two Superman movies, you know? So I would be very surprised if it was as funny and as sophisticated. But then, the youth of today is not interested in that. I think if Donner's movie came out now, it wouldn't be as charming as it was then.

Hello, Newman

Interview. Wayne Knight discusses doing sitcoms and being more versatile than his "Seinfeld" image (he hopes).

TV LAND

Wayne Knight's legacy is secure, thanks to two major contributions to 1990s culture: Newman on "Seinfeld" and greedy Dennis Nedry in "Jurassic Park." Knight is back with sitcom work on TV Land's "The Exes," starting its third season tonight at 10:30 p.m. But like many longtime workhorses, there's more to him, including films, other shows and Broadway. For instance, did you know he was on a 1980s sketch comedy show with Emma Thompson?

What's it like returning to sitcoms?
Basically, the nature of the job is equivalent to stealing. Once you've learned how to pilfer, you remember how to do it, it's highly profitable and it takes little effort. The great thing that TV Land does is, it hires veterans. Everybody knows what they're doing. You just feel relaxed.

You've said one thing you like about your "Exes" character is that he's a bit opaque, and you can play him in different ways.
This season, we get to see a bit more variance. We peel away revelations about what his marriage was like. There's depth to him that doesn't show all the time. There's broadness at times. There's cynicism. It depends on the plot.

Do you consciously try to avoid some of the darker tones of Newman or Dennis Nedry?
That's more in the public's eye than mine. I don't know if I'm as versatile as I'd like to pretend. [Laughs] The thing is, if you play two iconic characters who are evil guys, if you do it well, then that's what people want to see you do. I spent 10 years trying to change that, but after awhile you just go, "Oh, whatever."

Some of your earlier shows, including the 1985 British-American sketch comedy "Assaulted Nuts," with you and Emma Thompson, are now online.
In the era of YouTube, you can find a 1975 colonoscopy of yours. You have no idea what's out there.

You were also on Broadway in the play "Art," which was written by Yasmina Reza, who wrote "God of Carnage."
"Art" was perhaps my favorite experience onstage. It was very challenging. The script was coming from the French through the British to America. It's almost like you're translating an alien script. I had a big scene where I had to find a way to break down every night emotionally. The great thing about the play is, it's 90 minutes, without an act break. Her plays are incredibly great acting exercises. They're just trampolines that you can bounce on as high as you can go.

Q&A

You started as a serious stage actor.
I came to New York at 23 and was on Broadway for this play "Gemini," which was a comedy. I honed my chops over three years of doing that play. What was fascinating to me was learning how an audience works. You just learn these things about comic timing. And that grandfathers as you go, from one job to another job.

DIY furniture makeover

Decor. Transform a set of chairs or desk into a work of art.

Before you toss that hand-me-down dresser, Barb Blair suggests you try giving it a paint job. In her new book, "Furniture Makeover," the artsy designer and founder of Knack Studios arms aspiring DIY-ers with knowledge, courage and easy-to-follow instructions.

"One of the biggest things I hear from people is, 'I'm so afraid to do that to this piece,'" says Blair. "That's what I tried to dispel with the book. I wanted to take away the fear of painting furniture. It takes some time, yes ... but it's not rocket science." Here, she shows us how to spruce up curb-side mirrors.

TINA CHADHA
tina.chadha@metro.us

Tips

Knobby needs

"For changing out knobs, which I always feel is a must, hit up the sales section at Anthropologie where you can find great ones for $2 and $3," says Blair. "Hobby Lobby and World Market are other good sources."

Q&A

Why should people reimagine an old piece of furniture?

So many people come to me and say, "I've had my grandpa's or grandma's [furniture] in storage for 10 years." And then they see my book and say, "Oh, that's the exact same piece I've had in my attic." And if it's your grandpa's piece and it's sitting in your attic, you're not enjoying it. If you bring it down and DIY it and stick it in your foyer or bedroom and love it, by all means do it."

Some handy tips

- Use a medium sanding sponge to sand down whatever piece you want to paint, whether it's a dresser, stool or desk. "I prefer sanding sponges over paper because they're easier to hold," says Blair.
- Hit up the Oops paint section at Sherwin-Williams or Home Depot for cheap options. "They always have a section where they mixed the wrong color of paint or the customer didn't like the color once it was mixed and so a gallon of paint is around $5. Some of my best colors come from the Oops pile."
- "I am pretty particular about my paintbrush," confesses Blair. She uses Purdy nylon brushes for latex paint. "They're really soft and they make a huge difference."
- And if you're doing a big job, Blair says to roll the flat surfaces with a foam roller. "It's absolutely seamless and smooth."

Beauty is in the details

"If I'm doing a desk or chest of drawers, I love to line them with a fun paper that coordinates with the paint and the knob. It's nice when you open your drawers and see a pretty pattern. Details are just something I pay a lot of attention to."

Builders aren't just confident that their homes are level. They're confident in the market. / WAVEBREAK MEDIA

Builders' confidence a good sign for the market

Real estate. The housing recovery is gaining traction.

Confidence among U.S. homebuilders surged this month, staging its biggest gain since 2002 in one of the strongest signs yet that the housing recovery is gaining traction.

A majority of homebuilders say conditions for new construction are favorable, rather than poor, for the first time since the housing crisis began seven years ago, according to a closely watched index released on Monday.

Executives in the homebuilding industry say a steady rise in home prices, tighter inventories of properties up for sale and a slowing trend in foreclosures have helped the housing market regain its stride over the past year.

Even so, the big jump in confidence registered this month by the National Association of Home Builders/Wells Fargo Housing Market index was surprisingly robust.

Pete Flint, chief executive of online real estate company Trulia, said conditions were just right for confidence to blossom, with supply of available homes still trailing a rising tide of buying sentiment.

"We are in the early days of a real estate market recovery," he said. "The supply of homes for sale is still relatively small because sellers are reluctant to list in a rising market. They want to sell at the top."

And there's good reason for further bullishness, said Stan Humphries, chief economist from Zillow, an online real estate company, because annualized new home sales aren't even back to their historical average.

"At this point, I suspect many of the constraints preventing builders from building faster are logistical and land-related versus concerns about future demand," he said.

Quoted

Peter Flint
Chief executive of online real estate company Trulia

Flagging a more robust outlook for profits, the stronger-than-expected data buoyed homebuilder shares. But investors were mostly focused on whether the Federal Reserve would reinforce its commitment to supporting the economic recovery at its meeting yesterday and today. The market wants clues from the Fed on when it would start cutting back on its $85 billion in bond purchases every month.

Those purchases have stimulated the economy and kept mortgage rates near record lows in recent years. While a recent spike in market rates has raised concerns about the headwinds that might affect the recovery, home loans remain cheap by historical standards, a trend that bodes well for the market.

What the makeup artist says:

"It's all about creating a base that grips," explains LA-based makeup artist Melanie Inglessis, who has brushed up the likes of Lea Michele and Miley Cyrus. "For lipstick that lasts and doesn't bleed, apply a light layer of concealer or powder to your lips before adding color. Or use a lip pencil that is the same color as your lipstick. Draw the entire lip and color it inside. The pencil is matte and creates a solid base. Avoid products that are moisturizing and contain emollients, such as lip balm, which will slide off your skin."

What the makeup artist says:

"Glitter may be a summer festival must, but don't use it on your eyelids. It's a loose particle, so you'd need a creamy base to press the glitter on. And keep away from creamy eye shadow, which will smudge," warns Inglessis. She recommends a matte eye shadow or waterproof mascara. Another trick is to dab some concealer under the eyes: "The more your skin is bare, the more oil it has. The concealer will keep things in place," she adds.

What the makeup artist says:

"Rule No. 1: Use the right foundation for your skin type," says Inglessis. "If you have oily skin, don't go for a liquid foundation, but one that's powder-based. A face primer will give you a good base. It absorbs excess oil and mattifies your skin, ensuring that makeup doesn't move. But if you sweat a lot, it may be best to not use anything other than a good SPF and a concealer or powder as [a] cover up."

The big question with the new Analog Camera app is this: How is it not Instagram? Both allow photo junkies to mess up pictures, fresh or old, with retro-styled filters, then clog the Internet with the "work" they made with just a few clicks. A smoother interface is a nice touch. Designed by Realmac Software, who made the attractive to-do list app Clear, it puts all the filters in the middle of the screen, allowing one to better judge what one's doing to the pic before it goes out to the world. There's also no dorky borders. But is that enough?

It wouldn't be, but there's also this: The social media aspect has been downplayed. Yes, there are buttons handy that allow one to pester your Twitter buds with pics that look like they were taken circa 1978.

But where Instagram ends with your pictures spreading throughout the Global Village, Analog Camera makes it more of an option. You can just keep your business to yourself, rather than it being in everyone's faces. Alas, it's not completely its own thing: Like Instagram, the filters are kind of similar. And Analog doesn't allow for widescreen vista shots. There's an entire chunk of the smartphone screen going to waste, fellas.

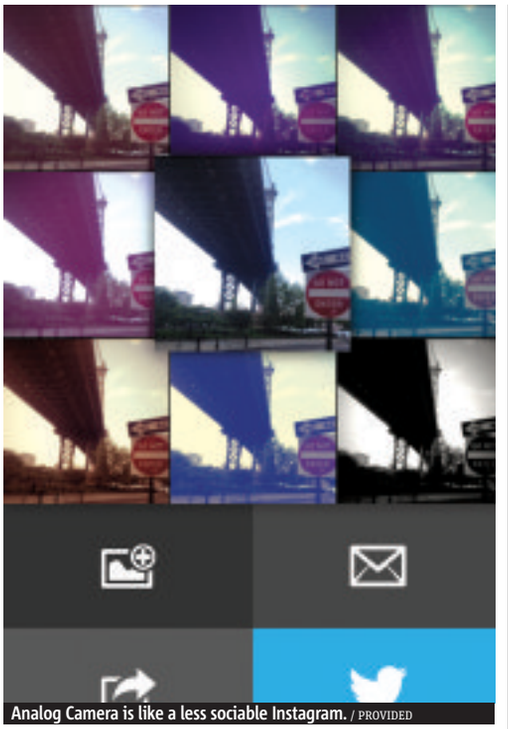
Summation: Instagram is for the oversharing kids, Analog is for the undersharing olds.

Talking Tom Cat

Platform: iOS
Price: Free
Genre: Cats

Though films like "Cats and Dogs" will have us think the former are snooty hellbeasts, the truth is cats are superior to dogs: Smarter, more emotionally complex and far less needy when it comes to waste. Even the cat in Talking Tom Cat is strangely smart. Standing in an alley way, he lets you have your way with him. You can pet his belly and make him purr, give him milk, even give him a live bird. You can also, if you're sadist, smack him in the face and knock him down. There are admittedly limited things you can do with him. (There are other a la carte functions you can get, if spending money on an app about a cat is something you would do.) But one feature offers endless (or somewhat endless) amusement: He repeats whatever you say to him, in a nasal voice.

Summation: It's a passable time-suck.



Analog Camera is like a less sociable Instagram. / PROVIDED

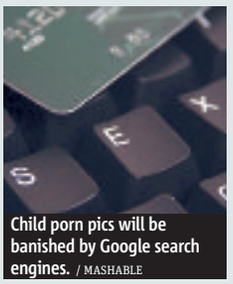
Google aims to abolish child porn pics with new database

Google announced plans over the weekend to remove child pornography images from the Web by using a new, picture-sharing database.

The program, which the Telegraph reported will be operational within the year, will allow search engines and other Web companies to swap information about images of children being abused or raped. Pictures that have been flagged as inappropriate — especially by child protection companies such as the Internet Watch Foundation — will be cleared from the Web.



Child porn pics will be banished by Google search engines. / MASHABLE

At the moment, flagged or earmarked images are difficult to eliminate entirely, given the absence of a Web-standard database. This new program will increase transparency between Web engines and — hopefully — speed up the process of tracking down and universally erasing these types of pictures.

In an e-mailed statement to Mashable, Google Director of Communications and Public Affairs Scott Rubin said, "We have a zero-tolerance attitude to child sexual abuse imagery online. The fight to remove these images from the Internet is a global one, and we hope these measures will help in that important battle."

5 TIPS FOR BUILDING A BETTER SALAD

Joy's Healthy Bite

JOY BAUER, MS, RD

WWW.JOYBAUER.COM

Health and Wellness expert for the 'Today' show and New York Times best-selling author.

If you're on a summer mission to eat light and healthy, choosing a veggie-packed salad seems like a no-brainer. But salads can pack more calories and fat than you think. A classic Cobb salad with chopped bacon, egg, blue cheese, avocado and creamy dressing can cost you more than 1,000 calories and 80 grams of fat! For some people, that's more than half their day's worth of calories. With that said, don't give up on salads — just follow these strategic steps and you'll chow down on a slimming and scrumptious meal that fills you up, not out.

1 Start with a strong foundation: Up the nutrition ante by choosing a base that provides important nutrients like folic acid, iron, beta carotene and lutein. Nix anemic iceberg and instead go for mesclun greens, baby spinach or a spring mix that includes a variety of dark green lettuces. For less than 20 calories per 2-cup serving, you're off to a great start.

2 Pile on the veggies: Take advantage of fresh vegetables and load them on top of your greens. Choose a variety of colors to get the most health benefits — red bell peppers, broccoli, carrots, sugar snap peas, cucumbers and red onions are all great choices. Stick with raw, steamed, grilled or roasted vegetables and steer clear of anything fried or swimming in oily marinades.

3 Don't forget the protein: Your salad becomes a meal when you add protein. If you're opting for animal protein, select a lean source such as egg whites, skinless chicken or turkey breast, water-packed chunk light tuna, wild salmon or shrimp. If you're vegetarian or just want to mix it up, choose cubed tofu, beans and/or lentils. Stay away from fatty meats like bacon and salami, and skip anything fried or in heavy sauce.

4 Dress it up lightly: Dressing can take a salad from light and nutritious to ferociously fattening. One tablespoon of your average vinaigrette is about 80 calories, and one tablespoon of creamy ranch is about 100 calories (restaurants use between 4 and 6 tablespoons — yikes!). Ask for the dressing on the side when ordering and whenever possible, choose light, low-calorie or low-fat options.

TOSS IN SOME SHRIMP FOR A LEAN PROTEIN PUNCH. GETTY IMAGES

Top it off

Pick one extra

Extras add another dimension and flavor to your combo of greens, vegetables and lean protein. While some of these are packed with nutrients, they're also packed with calories, so they should be added sparingly. Luckily, a little of these high-fat goodies goes a long way, so you won't need more than one of the following (each with between 40 and 70 calories):

- 2 tablespoons cheddar, Parmesan, goat, Swiss or feta cheese
- 1 tablespoon chopped walnuts, pecans or sliced almonds
- 1 tablespoon sunflower or pumpkin seeds
- 1 ounce avocado
- 10 small olives
- ¼ cup croutons
- 2 tablespoons dried cranberries or raisins

Don't be shady, wear the right sunglasses

Tips. The art of choosing a pair of sunnies goes beyond what looks good on you.

Blake Lively knows that staying safe in the sun can be fashionable.
LUXOTTICA, LENSCRAFTERS

See more at www.metro.us

When it comes to eye health, most damage comes from UV light. During summertime, when we spend more time outside, the risk greatly increases.

"Sunlight literally cooks the retina," says optometrist Dr. Rupe Hansra, LensCrafters' senior director of eye care. "Over time, it becomes yellow and hard, and we begin to lose good vision."

Wearing sunglasses year-round protects the retina from damaging UVA and UVB light and can help delay the onset of cataracts, macular degeneration and even basal cell carcinomas on the eyelids.

"The most common part of the body for skin cancer is the tip of the nose," Dr. Hansra says. "The second is the lower eyelid, which is very delicate and susceptible to sun damage."

So how do you choose a good pair? Here are Dr. Hansra's tips:

Just like sunscreen, look for a number

"For eye protection, a label that says UV 400 is what people should look for on sunglasses," he says. Not sure about your glasses' protection level? Your local LensCrafters or optometrist can test the UV prescription.

Size counts

"Typically, bigger is better. Choose large sunglasses that wrap around and block extraneous light coming from the side."

Get 'em polarized

"For driving, everyone should wear polarized sunglasses to cut down glare, which is related to so many accidents. Polarized sunglasses not only save your eyes but could save your life, too."

What is macular degeneration?

Macular degeneration is the deterioration of the macula, where color and 20/20 vision occurs. Besides UV light, genetics and smoking, obesity hastens its decline: "I always tell patients: What's good for your heart is good for the eye," Dr. Hansra says. "Beta-carotene, omega-3s and, most of all, lutein keep eyes healthy. Lutein is in green, leafy vegetables and most berries."

Pupil pointers

A report from the Healing The Eye and Wellness Center in Florida said that sunglasses harm vision by interfering with pupil dilation, which happens naturally to protect the macula. But you shouldn't worry, Dr. Hansra says.

"When you wear sunglasses, your pupils dilate slightly," he says. "As long as you have sunglasses with UV 400 protection, pupil dilation isn't a concern."

30-second lifesaver

In this new weekly section, we'll have an expert give us one easy tip that can change your life. This week's comes from Dr. Linda Franks, medical director of NYC's Gramercy Park Dermatology and spokeswoman for The Skin Cancer Foundation.

She echoes the sun safety sentiment.

- "Protect your scalp, face and neck from the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays with tightly woven, wide-brimmed hats and UV-blocking sunglasses."

Have a little faith in religion

Re: 'What's faith done for anyone?' (Metro, June 18)
Letter writer Amanda Canetti asks a good question. What good is religion? I lament that so many people feel this way — they see wars over religion, they see believers persecuting others — and all because of a "matter of opinion." Yet this "opinion" can and has done lots of good for many. The nasty, extremist voices usually speak the loudest and give religion a bad image, while the loving voices are drowned out. They are there, though, and always will be. Just look around.

ANNIE FERRIS, VIA EMAIL

Wars have historically been fought over resources, even when religion has been used to justify them. Freedom of religion is a right in America. Most religions share the requirement that love and compassion be cultivated and that we not allow our differences to separate us. Amen to that.

LINDA WHITTAKER, VIA EMAIL

Mattingly returns to the Bronx

Many Yankee fans in their 30s probably had the famous Don Mattingly returns to the Bronx "Hit Man" posters on their walls in tribute to the former Yankee first baseman's dominant seasons in the mid-1980s.

Today's doubleheader will be their chance to express appreciation for Mattingly in a setting other than Old-Timer's Day as he returns to the Bronx for the second time since leaving with Joe Torre following the 2007 season.

Appropriately enough, Mattingly's pregame press conference yesterday lasted 23 minutes. While heavy rains fell, a montage of his highlights played on the scoreboard.

"Obviously, it's good to come back," Mattingly said. "I always really enjoy coming back into the city. … It's always been, for me, great. You don't quite understand the relationship, honestly."

Youkilis to undergo surgery on his back

MLB. The Yankees received more bad injury news as their third baseman is out three months.

When the Yankees signed Kevin Youkilis in December in the wake of Alex Rodriguez's hip injury, they liked how he hit left-handed pitchers and grinded out at-bats.

They also were aware of his recent back troubles.

General manager Brian Cashman said yesterday Youkilis has a herniated disk in his back discovered after an MRI. The injury will require surgery tomorrow and will keep him out for 10 to 12 weeks.

"Kevin is a helluva player when healthy," Cashman said. "And he just hasn't been in a position to show in season what he's capable of doing because of the back.

"He obviously did so much for Boston over the years, and he's the type of player that if you could draw it up, that's the type of player we would want — a gamer with power and plate discipline."

Teixeira to DL

When he hit three home runs against the Indians two weeks ago, Mark Teixeira sounded upbeat about the condition of his wrist.

- Following a 4-for-35 road trip, the good feelings have dissipated, and the Yankees placed him on the 15-day DL.

Quoted

"It's not how you draw it up. There's no doubt about that."

Mid-major talent

Wolters could be hidden gem late

Nate Wolters is a bit of a mystery because he was an under-the-radar high school player who wasn't prominent on the AAU circuit, and then went to a mid-major program.

But Wolters feels he has a lot to offer should the Knicks grab him.

"I've watched [the Knicks] a lot because they were on national TV a lot, and they definitely need a point guard. They like to spread the floor out and shoot a lot of 3s, so I think I'd fit in perfectly," Wolters said. "Jason Kidd just retired, and Raymond Felton is a solid point guard, so I definitely feel I can add to it. … I'm really good with the pick-and-roll game, and I know they run a ton of pick-and-roll." TONY WILLIAMS

Knicks work out Dieng with post depth in mind for draft

Dieng's defensive game is well ahead of his offensive talents leaving college. / GETTY IMAGES

NBA. The former Louisville center could be a fit for the team at No. 24.

The Knicks hosted another workout yesterday with specific needs in mind.

Now that both Jason Kidd and Rasheed Wallace have retired, and Pablo Prigioni is still debating whether to return to the team or go back to Argentina, there are a couple of voids at two of the most important spots on the roster — backup point guard and depth in the post.

Among the names at the workout were Louisville center Gorgui Dieng and South Dakota State point guard Nate Wolters.

The latter will most certainly be available by the time the Knicks select at No. 24, while Dieng falls in the 20s in mock drafts. Should he be available, head coach Mike Woodson could use the depth.

"I played for a coach who was really demanding, and I came from a winning program. All I care about is winning and whatever it takes, so I don't think I'll see a coach again that'll drive me like him," said Dieng. "Wherever I go, I won't have a problem."

He even went as far as to say he'd rather fall to a stable franchise versus a lottery team, because he wants to stick in the league as long as possible.

"[Pitino] said I can go anywhere from 12 to 20, [but] when it comes to draft pick, I don't really care. I just want to go to a [good] team," Dieng said. "When it comes to the draft, you can last only two years or 10. If you have the same talent [coming] out of college and go to a bad team, you can only last two years. But you can go to the right team out of college with the same talent and last 10 years."

Quoted

"To me, I don't care where I'm going. I just want to be a first-round pick and go to the right team, and I'll take care of the rest."

Report: Vigneault signs deal with Rangers

Vigneault / GETTY IMAGES

After a verbal agreement over the weekend, the Rangers have reportedly inked Alain Vigneault to a deal to officially become their next head coach.

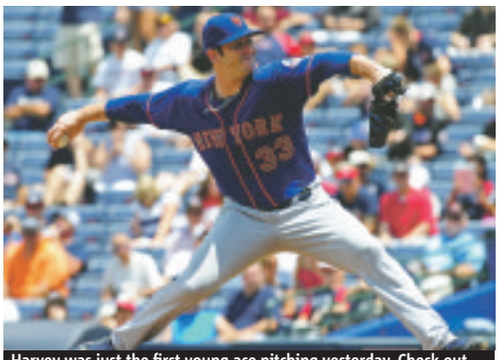
The deal is for five years and $10 million, according to multiple sources.

Vigneault, 52, reportedly received a similar offer from Dallas, where he interviewed for the vacant job as well.

He was fired by the Canucks on May 22 after his team was swept by San Jose in the first round of the Western Conference playoffs. But Vigneault had tremendous success in hockey-crazed Vancouver, despite not winning a Stanley Cup. Vigneault was with the Canucks since 2006 and made the playoffs every year but 2007-08. He won the Jack Adams Award as top coach in 2007. METRO

Harvey, Mets eek out win

MLB. The first of yesterday's starts by a young ace in Atlanta went mostly as planned.



Harvey was just the first young ace pitching yesterday. Check out www.metro.us for coverage of Zack Wheeler's debut. / GETTY IMAGES

Matt Harvey carried a no-hitter into the seventh inning, and the Mets' bullpen just managed to hang on for a 4-3 win over Atlanta in the first game of a day-night doubleheader yesterday.

Harvey lost his no-hitter on an infield hit by Jason Heyward in which Lucas Duda didn't cover first, but he was sterling as usual in earning his sixth win this season. He finished with a line of seven innings, three runs and a career-high 13 strikeouts. All three runs scored in the eighth inning after he had been removed with the bases loaded. LaTroy Hawkins and Scott Rice allowed the inherited runners to come in.

Bobby Parnell shut things down in the ninth inning to earn his 10th save.

John Buck got off the schneid with his first home run since May 24, though he still leads the team. Marlon Byrd continued his hot hitting with two hits, an RBI and a run scored.

Rookie Alex Wood, one of the Braves' top pitching prospects and just 22 years old, lasted just three innings and 73 pitches in his first career start.

DEPRESSION MEDICATION AND LOW SEX DRIVE OFTEN GO HAND IN HAND

Consider our clinical research study.

Many commonly prescribed antidepressant medications can have sexual side effects resulting in lack of interest in sex, lack of arousal, or inability to reach orgasm. We are conducting a clinical research study to better understand the effects on sexual functioning of an investigational medication when compared with an approved medication.

You may be eligible to participate if you:

- Are 18-55 years old
- Are currently taking Celexa® (citalpram), Paxil® (paroxetine) or Zoloft® (sertaline) and your depression is well controlled
- Are experiencing sexual side effects through to be caused by your antidepressant medication

At the first study visit we will also review your medical history and other criteria to see if you are eligible for participation. All study-related office visits, medical examinations, psychological assessments and study medications will be provided at no cost to qualified participants. You may also receive compensation for your time and travel.

DO YOU HAVE PSORIASIS?

ARE YOU UNHAPPY WITH YOUR CURRENT TREATMENT?

Manhattan Medical Research is conducting a research study for adults to test the effectiveness of an investigational medication for moderate to severe psoriasis.

Eligibility Includes:

- Adults ages 18 to 70
- Currently have moderate to severe psoriasis (red, thicker patches that may have silvery scales and often itch)

Study Involves:

- Visits to our clinical facility over an approximate 20 week period
- Usage of study medication

Qualified participants will receive study medication, medical exams and laboratory testing at no charge. Compensation for your time may also be provided.

Contact us to see if you qualify.
Health insurance is not needed.

ATTENTION MEN DO YOU HAVE LOW TESTOSTERONE?

SYMPTOMS OF LOW TESTOSTERONE MAY INCLUDE:

- Fatigue
- Erectile dysfunction
- Decreased sexual desire
- Mood disturbance
- Loss of energy

If so, please contact Manhattan Medical Research today to see if you may qualify for our research study of an investigational medication for men with low testosterone.

QUALIFIED PARTICIPANTS MUST:
Be 18 to 60 years of age
Have been diagnosed with low testosterone or have symptoms of low testosterone

Qualified participants will receive all study-related care and study medication at no cost, plus compensation for time and travel. There is a chance you might receive placebo.
